

EXTRACTIONS

Sometimes teeth are broken down so badly that the only available treatment is the removal of the tooth. These teeth may be painful, or not have any pain associated with them. They may currently have an abscess, or may not show any sign of infection. But even a tooth that is not causing any problems currently has the potential to cause pain and lead to a more serious infection. Therefore, removal of a nonrestorable tooth is always recommended.

